JAMMIN' — The patrons of Junction Bar and Grill listen to Gregg Aranda and John Barlie. The two give free performances on Friday nights at the local bar to packed houses.

Students flock to bar's free music

STEFANIE SIZEMORE
STAFF WRITER

Free live music is usually hard to find, but it is becoming a regular thing in Bowling Green on Friday nights.

Two months ago, Junction Bar and Grill on the corner of Main and Wooster started offering free live music on Friday nights to those 21 and older.

Chris Small, general manager of Junction, brought in two of his friends, Gregg Aranda and John Barlie, to perform.

Aranda and Barlie have been playing acoustic guitar and singing together for over four years, and Small thought they would be a great addition to Friday nights at the bar.

"They play the kind of music our customers enjoy, so I thought it would be a great idea to have them come play and see what the crowd thought," he said. "We will keep them here as long as they want to play and people want to see them."

Small thinks that Friday nights at Junction is a great opportunity for everyone to listen to great musicians.

"I have known John and Gregg for a long time and I think this is a great chance for people in BG to listen to music of this caliber," he said.

Aranda and Barlie play a wide variety of music including The Beatles, The Grateful Dead, The Allman Brothers, and Johnny Cash.

Aranda admits that one of his favorite parts of playing at Junction is the crowd.

"We are very pleased with the turnout and we have so much fun with the people that come to see us on Friday nights," he said. "It amazes me that still another generation can appreciate the music we play."

Aranda and Barlie began playing at the bar only a few months ago, but Small has already seen a drastic pick-up in business.

"Since they began playing, I would say our crowd on Friday nights has doubled," he said.

Small has even started getting calls to reserve tables and booths for Friday nights.

"We have people calling here and showing up a half hour before they start, just so they can get a good seat and enjoy the music," he said. "I am definitely beginning to see a following."

Aranda and Barlie have also started to notice a lot of regulars.

"We have a lot of regulars but the women's club rugby team have to be our most loyal fans."

Students find Peace Corps as alternative after graduation

IRENE SHARON SCOTT
CHIEF REPORTER

When she first arrived in Armenia, all she could think about was getting a drink of water, yet the refreshing water she craved almost made her gag.

At age 23, she left behind her family and friends in exchange for a three-year stay in the town of Sisian, Republic of Armenia, located in middle eastern Eurasia, east of Turkey.

Lisa Householder, daughter of a University professor, is one of 7,000 Peace Corps volunteers and trainees who traveled overseas to experience another culture while making a difference.

"I am so grateful for my experience in Armenia," she said. "I feel like I have taken the blinders off and now I see the world completely."

She was motivated to join Peace Corps because she wanted to experience another culture.

"Honestly, I couldn't really imagine what it would be like, no matter how many accounts I read," she said. "Once I learned that I would be going to Armenia I read everything I could get my hands on."

In Armenia, she taught English as a foreign language at a humanitarian college in Sisian. She also taught English in a small village school for grades three through eight. In addition, she had a tutor who taught her how to read and write their native language.

"Teaching English was my primary project," she said. "I also worked with the village school director to write a proposal to rehabilitate the school building."

As a result of the proposal, a grant was given to accommodate more students who typically traveled to a nearby village to go to school.

One of her fondest memories was the Armenian hospitality.

"Armenia is an amazing place," she said. "For such a small country, it is chock-full of history and turmoil. Armenians, by far, are the most generous and hospitable people I know. I literally found a home away from home."

Looking back, she said the people were so generous that every time she walked down the street she was invited in for coffee.

The living conditions there were not as rugged as one might imagine, she said.

"I lived in an apartment, communist-block style, with running water and electricity — I was fortunate," she said.

Although Householder did face challenging situations, she said there were cultural differences. For instance, she said she had to adjust to the Armenian bluntness.

She also said that there was no hot water where she lived and she had to learn how to cook and make things from scratch.

"There were no microwaves there and the refrigerators were expensive," she said. "If you didn't have one, you just didn't. It was fortunate that the Peace Corps did provide us with a fridge."

Householder said she sometimes was lonely, but found comfort in visiting her neighbors.

"Once I became comfortable with my surroundings [and] my job, the difficult Armenian language and the challenges became part of the life I had grown to enjoy," she said.

After completing her Peace Corps experience, Householder said she was more mature and had a stronger sense of self.

"I am much more confident as a person," Householder said. "I have such a different perspective of the world as a whole."

USG looks into budget problems

SARA GRAZIANO
STAFF WRITER

Two weeks ago, USG treasurer Jill Whyde resigned in the face of budget difficulties.

Now USG is trying to resolve an approximately $20,000 discrepancy in their budget.

Two weeks ago, former treasurer Whyde presented the general assembly with a budget showing USG had $25,401.54 in funds remaining.

This week, newly appointed USG treasurer Nick Gresko told the general assembly they have $5,845.57, plus or minus a few thousand dollars.

"This is a shabby budget, but it's still a budget," said USG finance committee chair Joe Stuart. "We can't be too specific about this number, because we're unsure what has been paid and what hasn't."

Gresko, former community service chair for USG, was sworn in as the new treasurer on Monday night.

"We have 13 bills, 12 of which are not paid, to go over," Gresko said. "We need to go through things line item by line item to figure out what line items they took things from."

USG members agree the budget problems were not anticipated.

"The state of the budget was quite poor before, and we didn't know," Stuart said. "Now we have a firmer handle on it."

The budget problems can be traced to several sources.

"The budget problems are ultimately the past treasurer's fault, but we can't just point at the past treasurer," Stuart said.

Winning season increases University spirit

Men's basketball team credited with rise in University enthusiasm

NICOLE VALEK
STAFF WRITER

School spirit has increased because of the success of the men's basketball team, according to University students.

"I think school spirit has been the greatest this year, and a lot of it has to do with the basketball team's performance," said Melissa Kimbler, junior varsity cheerleader.

Tricia Howard, coach of the BGSU dance team, said, "I think it is because the Falcons are doing really well and the team makes the games exciting to watch."

"It is an exciting atmosphere," said Brian Belkin, sophomore sports information major. "It is fun to be part of such a big crowd."

"I don't know if school spirit is actually increasing, but there has been an increase in [game] attendance," said Kirk Mueller, sophomore criminal justice major. "Fans get to the games an hour and a half early, and if our team wasn't as good as it is, I don't think they would be there otherwise."

It is true that attendance has been exceptionally high this season. Two games, Akron and Toledo, were sold out. Wednesday's game against Kent is also expected to sell out.

High attendance at games and increased school spirit can also be attributed to the Falcon Spirit Team. The main purpose of the first-year organization is to plan activities that will encourage students to attend and enjoy athletic events. The organization is working in cooperation with the athletic department, residence halls, the athletic band and other organizations on campus to promote a stronger BGSU community.

If students want to show spirit, join the Student Alumni Association in Room 101 B Olscamp for a pre-game party before the game today from 5:30 to 7 p.m. There will be free food, door prizes and live music by Chester Copper Pot.

CROWD — A packed crowd of students at Anderson Arena cheer for the men's basketball team. More students are showing up to the games because of the winning season.

New spirit squad adds to building excitement about team

GUEST WRITER

An hour before the game begins, men's basketball fans can be seen waiting outside Anderson Arena. This year, fans have taken additional time and energy to support BG.

Much of the support has come from the Falcon Spirit Team. The Falcon Spirit Team is a first-year organization, and the first united spirit organization on Bowling Green's campus.

The team, which has about 60 members, began as a "personal challenge" for Sara Prendeville, a senior sport management major and resident advisor. Prendeville created the program to encourage University residents to attend athletic events, but soon decided "the Falcon Spirit Team is something that everyone should be involved in."

The FST attends each game. They can be seen at center court, fully clad in BG's orange and brown. To motivate the crowd, the team brings free T-shirts, balloons and pompons. They also hand out signs before the games.

During time-outs, the FST conducts contests and gives free Domino's pizza and hot dogs to the loudest fans. Cries of, "We want Pizza!" echoed through the arena at a recent game.

"It's really amazing to see so many people getting into this," said Ryan Salsgiver, a senior IPC major and varsity cheerleader. "This crowd has been the best I've ever seen."

And a good crowd is important. Earlier this season, Dan Dakich, head coach of the men's basketball team said, "Student support can directly affect the outcome of a college basketball game, more so than in any other sport."

So far, the men's basketball team is undefeated on its home turf.

"The more people we can get involved, the more possibilities we have. We have an opportunity to really help out the teams," said Prendeville.

With the help of more students and organizations, the team would like to hold more spirit events, like a pep rally.

In the future, the FST would also like to get students more involved in other Bowling Green athletics. "Our next challenge will be to increase attendance at baseball and softball games," Prendeville said.

The team would also like to pro-

Weapons found en route to tense Kosovo city

KOSOVSKA MITROVICA, Yugoslavia (AP) — U.N. police searched Tuesday for the driver and passenger who fled an ambulance loaded with powerful weapons after it overturned en route to this tense, divided city.

Among the stash were 14 anti-tank rocket launchers, more than 180 high-explosive grenades and over 3,000 cartridges for guns, NATO said. U.N. police were searching for the unidentified occupants, who they said fled the vehicle immediately after it landed in a ditch.

The ambulance, which apparently went into the ditch late Monday after attempting a U-turn just before a French checkpoint outside Kosovska Mitrovica, was marked "Cooperazione e Sviluppo," an Italian humanitarian agency.

The Nation In Brief

Five family members killed in Missouri home

WARRENSBURG, Mo. (AP) — Della Davis had this image of the Wood family: a playful bunch whose home-schooled children were often seen riding their bikes down the dirt roads and hills near their underground home.

Davis, the family's nearest neighbor, could not square the scenes with those of Monday, when gunshots shattered the morning calm and killed Tina Wood, 31, and four of her children.

Two other children, girls aged 1 and 3, were wounded and are in fair and critical condition, respectively. Both are expected to survive.

Authorities late Monday night charged Wood's husband with the slayings. Investigators had not determined a motive.

Raymond E. Wood, 36, was to be arraigned this morning first-degree murder, first-degree assault and armed criminal action. He was held on $2 million bond.

Outgoing U.N. official criticizes Iraq resolution

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BAGHDAD, Iraq — Iraqi civilians will continue to suffer under the latest U.N. Security Council resolution, the top U.N. official in Iraq said Wednesday in explaining why he quit.

Hans Von Sponeck said the new Iraq policy was flawed and did not make a clear distinction between civilian needs and disarmament obligations.

"I do not think this resolution has a chance to come to fruition very quickly ... even if that happens I do not think that this is enough," Von Sponeck told The Associated Press in an interview. His resignation became official Monday.

Following Von Sponeck's example, Jutta Burghardt, the head of the U.N. World Food Program in Iraq, resigned Tuesday. European diplomats in Baghdad said she was also protesting the U.N. sanctions imposed on Iraq for its 1990 invasion of Kuwait.

But a spokesman for the Rome-based WFP denied Burghardt's resignation was related to the sanctions and said she quit to return to work for the German government.

The resignations come at a time when the U.N. Security Council is striving to persuade Iraq to accept its December resolution.

VATICAN — Palestinian leader Yasser Arafat kisses Pope John Paul II's hand prior to their talks at the Vatican Tuesday.

Vatican, Palestinians condemn unilateral actions on Jerusalem

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

VATICAN CITY — The Vatican joined the Palestinians on Tuesday in condemning Israel's hold over all of Jerusalem as "morally and legally unacceptable," aggravating the Israelis just a month before the pope's visit to the Holy Land.

An agreement signed by the Vatican and Palestinian officials called for an internationally guaranteed statute to preserve "the proper identity and sacred character" of the city, which is holy to Jews, Christians and Muslims.

The text did not mention Israel by name, but the Jewish state has consistently considered Jerusalem its indivisible capital since it annexed the eastern section following the 1967 Mideast War. It has repeatedly ignored previous Vatican calls for such a statute.

The Vatican, like many states, has never recognized Israel's occupation of eastern Jerusalem. The final status of the city is to be decided in talks between Israelis and the Palestinians, acknowledged as one of the most difficult points in the entire peace process.

The strong wording in Tuesday's bilateral agreement appeared to take the Israelis by surprise. The Foreign Ministry said the Vatican's representative in Israel has been asked to come to an "urgent meeting" Wednesday to discuss the matter.

"Israel flatly rejects the references to Jerusalem in the aforementioned document," the Israeli Foreign Ministry said in a statement. "Jerusalem, was, is, and shall remain the capital of the State of Israel, and no agreement or declaration by these or any other parties will change this fact."

Zvi Tal, spokesman for Israel's embassy to the Holy See, said that while the Vatican's stance was known, Tuesday's action amounted to interference in the Israeli-Palestinian peace negotiations. He also said the Palestinians appeared to have breached an agreement with Israel limiting the types of further agreements they could make.

POP-A-TOP AGAIN

I think my life is turning into an old-fashioned country song. Hear me out. The mopey column of the week. Take that, Judson, Tran and Justin. Think your Valentine's Day was bad? Just wait.

Actually, the whole thing started on Sunday. Actually, it started a few weeks ago. Remember that guy I wrote about in my endtag? The one with the pick-up truck. Him.

I thought we were getting along well. Hung out a few times. Watched a few movies, had lunch. Talked about deep stuff. He was even Catholic. And damn he could kiss, too.

Apparently, I was wrong. Hadn't heard from the pick-up man since Wednesday. No big deal. We're busy people. I left a message at his house on Friday, expecting a call on Sunday morning. This is when I normally hear from him, after he gets back from the horse barn.

So I called his mom on Sunday afternoon. "Oh, I'll tell him you called when he calls home." What do you mean, when he calls home? "He moved to Cleveland this weekend to work with the horses. He won't have a phone until Monday." I'm not making this up. This is too bizarre to make up.

In any case, I'm not that bad of a person to drive a man 120 miles across the state. I swear. My friends keep telling me he probably owes the MAN money. I think he knocked up some girl and wouldn't tell me. One friend suggested he was failing out of school and couldn't face up to it. Geez. (Editor's note: Denise really is a nice girl. She deserves a nice man. But maybe she just wants to prove that she is cuter than the photo at the top of her column would lead you to believe.)

Monday was just a continuation of the saga. First, I overslept. Not unusual. But then I had to scrape ice off of my truck for the second time in eight hours. Work was the usual sweeps period irritation.

Then, I had to scrape ice off of my truck for the third time in 12 hours.

Took a nap when I got home. The mailman came. Did I get Valentine's Day cards? No. I got a notice from my bank telling me I only had $.75 in my account and I tried to charge $.88. My check that covered it was deposited in the account 12 hours after the charge went through.

Talked to my mom about my birthday. February 25, for those of you keeping track. She told me that she wasn't going to make me a cake. She always makes a cake for birthdays. I'm turning 21, for crying out loud. But no cake.

My two classes were no improvement on the day. One was a lecture I was totally lost in. The other was a test. I'll let you wonder how I did on it.

So that was my Valentine's weekend. Told you I would show up those dumb columnist boys. And not having a Valentine is not even the reason I don't celebrate the holiday.

Denise Domanski will be graduating in December. BABY. She doesn't necessarily want to leave with an MRS to a man with light eyes, but she is interviewing candidates for the temporary position. Email her at ddomanski@bgsu.edu for an interview.

The Devil's Dictionary

In 1881, Ambrose Bierce, working as the editor of the San Francisco-based Wasp, penned his first installment of The Devil's Dictionary. Over a century later, Bierce's definitions are the most widely-quoted American wit.

Humorist, n. A plague that would have softened down the hoar austerity of Pharaoh's heart and persuaded him to dismiss Israel with his best wishes, cat-quick.

Satire, n. An obsolete kind of literary composition in which the vices and follies of the author's enemies were expounded with imperfect tenderness.

Wit, n. The salt with which the American humorist spoils his intellectual cookery by leaving it out.

Being genius translates into procrastination

It's just lucky I'm such a genius. Otherwise I don't know what would become of me.

After being in college for almost three years, I still approach school with the same suspicious disregard I had for it in elementary school.

In those days I used to keep my assignments crumpled up under my bed. If they weren't there, they could be found in a soggy mass on the school bus floor with a muddy foot print stamped across it.

But I didn't spend too much time worrying about this, for once I left school each day, I promptly forgot I had ever been there.

This always caught up with me on Sunday night. I hated Sundays because all day long I knew I had to go back to school the next day. Worse — none of my homework was ever done.

Typically, I didn't even know what my homework had been. If, during special times when the planets and stars were aligned just right, I had mysteriously completed my homework, I quickly set about losing it. If I didn't lose it, I failed — for a reason as mysterious as the fact I did it at all — to turn it in.

Honestly, if I hadn't ridden the bus, I wouldn't have known where the school was. I certainly couldn't fathom why I had to be there. And if I did have to be there, I couldn't quite grasp why they couldn't dispatch us to the playground a bit more often.

Really, it was all quite a nuisance. Curiously, everyone found this very upsetting. Teachers and school psychologists would hover around me wringing their hands in despair, while administering endless tests.

MICHELLE REITER

Especially hearing tests. Apparently they felt that I must not have heard them, thereby explaining why I failed to do what I was supposed to.

I used to find that so amusing. While I good-naturedly complied with their little tests, my finished homework was usually crumpled up under my bed somewhere, long forgotten. I spent a lot of time in detention answering to — Young Lady.

"Young Lady, I expect you to..."

"Young Lady, you'd better..."

But I never listened. I knew what was really important — the Smurfs, for instance, and Christmas. But try telling the school psychologist that.

The teachers and school psychologists are now probably tucked into retirement homes, intermittently screaming out my name in terror, but my habits haven't changed much. I come to school every day with little idea of where I am or what goes on here.

This can be a bit of a problem while working at the college newspaper.

"So, you know, Dance Marathon?" someone will say to me in the middle of an interview.

"You know? You'd have to have been either dead or locked against your will in someone's basement eating flies not to have heard of it?"

"Oh, right," I'll lie.

"Does Dick Clark host that?"

Advising me is an equally hair-raising experience. I used to wander in like a lost child at the circus and ask, "Is this Bowling Green State University? Are you my advisor?"

"Yes," he'd reply. "You've been to see me twenty-four times already. You're a junior."

"Oh, right," I chuckle. "I thought you looked familiar. I'd like to graduate eventually, see, and I'm planning to drop all of my classes next semester except glass blowing. Do you think I can manage to graduate and obtain a high-ranking, executive corporate job by next June?"

My academic life isn't much better. Without my vivid imagination and a quick typing finger, I would surely be living in the YWCA selling hand-woven mats to this day.

For instance, if I get an assignment in January that's due March 15, I'll often drag its crumpled remains out from under my bed on March 14 and try to determine its purpose.

"A 15-page history of communism from a journalistic angle," I'll read to myself, on commercial break.

"Huh."

Then I'll have a nap. Research will be done between 10 and 10:45 a.m. the next day, writing between noon and 2:54 p.m., and an ingenious report with suspicious sources delivered at exactly 3 p.m.

It's actually kind of moving, the whole thing.

Of course, it doesn't always work that well, but as long as I take the initiative to begin my papers on the day they're due, I've got a good chance. Sometimes I begin the day after they're due, and that seems to interrupt the flow somewhat. I don't recommend it.

The obvious question is — what's going to become of me?

Will I graduate and work double shifts at the Dairy Queen and date large, hairy men with weapons and motorcycles? Will I wind up in a maximum-security prison convicted of aggravated fabrication with intent to procrastinate? Will I be staring at inkblots until I'm 80, insisting they all look like Smurfs?

What, what?

Oh, calm down, I'll be just fine.

After all, I'm a genius. Institutions worldwide will seek access to my intimidating brain power — perhaps they'll even clear a place for it at the Smithsonian after I die.

My commemorative plaque will say, "Owner of brain could impressively propel self to school, buy self a snack, and read biographies in the back of her University library when she was supposed to be studying her Italian verb conjugations."

And people will flock to see this. Meanwhile, everybody will know where to find me: right beneath the flashing, neon letters that spell out YWCA.

Present politics lost in past

I have a few comments to make in light of the article on student apathy about politics and our generation.

I've heard several people say that they wished they lived during the sixties, they wanted to be a part of a revolution and blah blah blah.

What I would like to see is a realization that a revolution takes place in your heart, not in the right setting or the right time.

Taking charge of how you feel about particular issues is the first step to radical change in this country.

So many people say that their vote doesn't count.

Well maybe it doesn't, but your voice certainly does.

Political action groups have a direct correlation with legislation and appropriation of money.

The loudest voice is the one that

Kristalyn Shefeland
Guest Columnist

gets heard.

So instead of grumbling about your opinion — stand up and scream it.

Join a group of people with sentiments like yours. Or better yet, get a group of your own friends together and decide what you want to say.

Personally, I like to know what is going on in my country. Think our government sucks? Try living in a third world country where you're not even aloud to echo these words. I've never lived there, and guess what? I'm not gonna give it a try.

Women need to pay attention when their issues are being challenged.

Right now we have a possible candidate for the presidency who is dead set on reversing the Roe v. Wade decision.

RU-486, the French Abortion Pill, is being slowly blocked from the American market.

Students supposedly don't feel that the election pertains to them.

Right...and you're not going to be officially entering the job market soon, you're not going to file your tax return if you don't do it yourself already.

You're definitely not going to care about the funding of lab research on a disease that could plague you in your later years.

Nope. You're too preoccupied with the real issues.

Wake up.

People being raped by MPAA

Can you imagine a world where you'll have to pay every time you want to listen to a CD you've bought, or watch a movie you already own?

Someday, you will.

Let's give you a little background: I need to introduce the MPAA, the big bad evil guys in all this.

The Motion Picture Association of America (yep, that's what it stands for) is made up of a bunch of companies like AOL/Time Warner and Sony (which owns Columbia Pictures) and all sorts of other folks who have entirely too much money to throw around. Closely related to them are the RIAA, essentially the same thing but with music instead of movies.

Got the players down?

Of course, they want more money. They have for years and years. These were the folks who started the whole Betamax lawsuit because people would be able to copy anything which came over the air. They were the ones who came up with the great idea of copy protection, which wouldn't be so bad if it didn't make the tape look bad when you've rented it and sit down to watch it.

Yep, and these are the folks who run around like Chicken Little, shouting that everyone's pirating their wares, they're all going to go broke, and the world will no longer be infused with quality entertainment like Robocop III.

What a pity.

So let's bring this into the present-day world and give you the breakdown on their two current gripes: MP3s and DVD players. MP3s, for those select members of the audience who live under rocks or in trees, are sound files. They're what you'd get if you just ripped a song off a CD you own, except that they're a lot smaller.

MATT KUZNICKI

Now, they sure weren't hurting anyone when they were first born. Sure, a few huge pirate sites got torn down, but it was all in the spirit of fair game. But as soon as a portable player came out, well, they had to cry out "No fair! No fair!"

See, people were going to run around copying everything in sight, just like all those tape decks out there have run everyone out of business. So when that didn't work, other targets were picked.

The RIAA started giving the shakedown to universities to scan for MP3s on their students' machines (which this University lied to you about, but that's a different column entirely).

They started suing everybody again. And that's what happened to Napster, too, in case you were curious.

DVDs are a different matter entirely. They seem nice and easy: just stick it in the player and let it play, for the most part. But the trouble is a bit more complicated.

On every DVD is, for all intents and purposes, one large file. I can peel this file off, copy it, and send it off to all my friends who can then play it on their computers. But to make a real player, the kind you'd hook up to your TV, you have to give way too much money to the MPAA and kiss their feet. The file is encrypted, which means that you need to have one of those neat super-secret decoder rings in your DVD player to watch it.

Well, it's not that simple, but just picture having to buy one if you're making a player. Doesn't sound too fair, right? What if I want to play my DVD but I don't want to spring for a program?

That's where Jon Johansen comes into everything. Jon is a 15 year old kid living in Norway. He didn't like the situation too much, either. So (condensed-quite-a-lot version) he and a couple of other folks found themselves a decoder ring and posted it for everyone to use. Now the MPAA didn't like this too much, and decided to do the Chicken Little dance again, boo hoo hoo and all that.

Okay, so you're probably asking where this is all leading: easy.

The Holy Grail of ripping you and me off is being able to charge us for whenever we use something. This is why we have to pay $8.75 to go see a movie.

Imagine a world where every song from a CD snips a quarter off your credit card every time you listen to it.

Imagine self-destructing DVDs which will last a couple of days.

Don't worry, the last one was already tried. It failed, but it's being tried again.

But this is why I'm boycotting the movies, because I don't want to have to pay every time I listen to a song or watch a movie I've already bought, because some 15 year old kid shouldn't have his house raided for legally using what he owns.

This is why you should boycott.

KILLINGS — Columbine High School students show emotion at the tragic scene near the school shooting in Littleton, Col. The recent shootings of two classmates have left many students wondering.

Investigators still looking into Columbine students deaths

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

DENVER — Investigators worked to identify a suspect Tuesday in the killings of two Columbine High students at a sandwich shop, where a surveillance camera failed to capture the shootings.

A woman who works at the Subway shop noticed a light on in the shop about 1 a.m. Monday, three hours after it was supposed to have closed. She went inside and discovered the bodies of Nicholas Kunselman, 15, and his girlfriend, Stephanie Hart, 16.

Kunselman worked in the sub shop, and Hart, whom he had been dating, had come by the shop to pick him up, friends said. The Subway is about two blocks from Columbine, where two teen-agers fatally shot 12 fellow students and a teacher before killing themselves in April.

Jefferson County sheriff's investigators were trying to identify a motive and a suspect in the Subway killings. Spokesman Steve Davis declined to say whether a weapon was found but said the store's camera did not capture the crime.

Columbine classes met as usual Tuesday but attendance was down about 10 percent, said Tanya Spasev, a spokeswoman for Jefferson County School District.

"The mood is just trying to pick up and move on," she said.

A small crowd of mourners stopped in the parking lot outside the shop Tuesday, placing bouquets of flowers, messages and helium balloons.

Hours after the bodies were discovered, gun-control advocates unveiled a wall in Denver bearing the names of 3,094 people killed nationwide with guns since the Columbine massacre. Denver Mayor Wellington Webb and others hope the wall will encourage state legislators to enact stricter gun laws.

Nebraska police stage manhunt for Texas fugitive

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

PAXTON, Neb. — Military helicopters were called in and schools were closed Tuesday as more than 100 state troopers combed western Nebraska for a Texas survivalist wanted in the killing of a farmer and the wounding of two law officers.

The fugitive was identified as Charles Lannis Moses Jr., a 31-year-old construction worker.

Nebraska Gov. Mike Johanns declared a state of emergency Tuesday, the third day of the search, allowing the National Guard to use two unarmed Blackhawk helicopters in the search. The Nebraska State Patrol already had two planes and another helicopter taking part in the manhunt.

Authorities in Colorado and several other states also were asked to be on the lookout for Moses.

Police said the last confirmed sighting of Moses was Monday at an interchange on Interstate 80, about 20 miles west of Paxton.

In addition to school closings in the Paxton area, schools in Sidney, Neb., and Peetz, Colo., about 100 miles west of Paxton, did not let students leave without their parents. And deputies in Sedgwick County, Colo., searched hotels after getting a tip that Moses might be in the area.

A first-degree murder warrant was issued for Moses on Tuesday, one day after Robert Sedlacek, 48, was found shot to death near an abandoned farmhouse eight miles from Paxton. Police believe Moses had been hiding out on the farm and killed Sedlacek to steal his pickup truck.

BG economy on the rise

KIMBERLY DUPPS
STAFF WRITER

According to the Associated Press, the United States economy grew 5.8 percent during the last three months of 1999.

How does this number compare to Bowling Green?

Austin Sweeney, tax commissioner of Bowling Green, said that Bowling Green's economy is a "growing thing."

"The growth rate of the Bowling Green economy is faster than the general U.S. economy," Sweeney said.

The Bowling Green economy grew at a rate of 15 percent in 1999.

Earlene Kilpatrick, director of the Downtown Business Association, attributes the growth to the type of town Bowling Green is.

"Bowling Green has that wonderful hometown feel with the restaurants and shops of a larger town," Kilpatrick said.

In addition to the "feel" of Bowling Green, the safety and quality of the school system, as well as the University, have helped to promote economic growth in the city.

"What the University brings to the community has helped the Bowling Green economy. You don't have that relationship in other places," Kilpatrick said.

However, Sue Clark, executive director of the Bowling Green Community Development Foundation, believes that the U.S. economy has led other businesses to support the Bowling Green economy.

"The general economy nationwide is causing companies to look for new markets," Clark said. "Because of our proximity to I-75 and the turnpike, we are able to serve 70 percent of North American markets within a day."

Location has helped the industrial market in the city.

"We have seen a lot of growth in the industrial arena," Clark said. "The industry has invested $50 million in building, machinery and equipment into Bowling Green."

MaryAnn Gibson, owner of the Flower Basket, agrees, but feels that there are other contributing factors to the growth.

"I think it is because of the increase in population," Gibson said. "Bowling Green has become a bedroom community for Toledo."

"In any area that is growing, you have to have people coming in and buying things," Gibson said.

All of these factors have helped bring the Bowling Green rate of growth to approximately three times the national average.

"We are in good shape economically and we have been consistent over the years," Sweeney said.

Klinger battles experience in state senate race

ANNE MOSS
STAFF WRITER

Two Bowling Green residents, Democrat Eric Klinger and Republican Randall Gardner, are going head-to-head for the 2nd District Senate position in the March 7 primary election.

Gardner is the more experienced of the two candidates. He is currently serving his eighth term for 4th District in the House of Representatives. He is also the speaker pro tempore in the Ohio House.

Gardner's interest in the Senate seat was sparked when current 2nd District senator, Republican Robert Latta, announced that he was going to try his hand at the House of Representatives.

In Gardner's eight terms in the House, he has passed several legislations for northwest Ohio. Gardner's most recent legislation set aside $4 million for the Conservation Reserve Enhancement Program for area counties.

Klinger has never served on federal, state, or city government, he said. This is his first campaign. He was asked by some friends involved with the Democratic party to run for senate, and he willingly obliged their offer.

Gardner received his bachelor's and master's degrees from the Uni-

State Rep. Randall Gardner throws his hat into the senate arena after eight terms in the House.

Before his term in the House, Gardner was a high school history and government teacher.

Gardner has been a member of the Chamber of Commerce, Wood County Farm Bureau, Sons of the American Legion and Wood County Historical Society.

Klinger is employed by a Toledo-based software company, and works out of a home office.

Klinger's main platform is campaign finance reform. Campaigns are usually financed by special interest groups, private industries, "soft money" or other sources, he said.

Klinger said the money that comes from the pockets of special interest groups and political action committees is "shifty and creates loopholes in the person's campaign." He said that voters dislike outside funding because they feel distant from candidates. Then they do not vote because they think that their support is not needed. Klinger would like to see this changed.

"My idea is that the candidates can fund their own campaign just as effectively through finding free airtime for commercials, [utilizing] more individual money and other ways," Klinger said.

Klinger's campaign is not being financially supported by anybody, but is backed by the Democratic party.

Klinger also plans to address problems with term limits for senators and educational reform in his campaign.

Gardner's campaign will include educational reform and bringing the public more in touch with the government.

"Every year, in every county of the senate district [Erie, Lucas, Ottawa and Wood], I will host education summits to meet with teachers, parents, and others on the front lines in educating our children," Gardner said.

"Every year, in every county of the Senate district, I will host local government conferences to talk personally with local government officials about the problems and challenges they face in our townships, villages and cities," he said.

Gardner's campaign is being supported by fellow congressmen and the Republican party.

"I'll bring the same energy and work ethic to the Senate that I've maintained in the House of Representatives," Gardner stressed.

"Gardner is running because his term limit as House Representative is up," Klinger said. "And coincidentally, Latta is stepping down. So basically, they just want to switch jobs to keep Republican power high."

Bailey says neighbors killed Marilyn Sheppard

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CLEVELAND — F. Lee Bailey, who won acquittal for Dr. Sam Sheppard at the doctor's second trial for murdering his wife, outlined a theory Tuesday that two neighbors killed Marilyn Sheppard in the 1954 case that partly inspired "The Fugitive" TV series.

Bailey's version of the murder is at odds with the theory supported by the Sheppards' son, Sam Reese Sheppard, who has sued the state claiming his late father was wrongfully imprisoned for 10 years for his mother's death.

Bailey was called as the leadoff witness in the lawsuit trial. The celebrity lawyer, who also helped defend O.J. Simpson, was on the witness stand for much of Monday and Tuesday.

Sheppard's lawyers called Bailey to show the doctor's first trial in 1954 was unfair because of a flood of negative news reports.

A few years after Bailey took the case, the U.S. Supreme Court overturned the first trial's verdict in a landmark ruling against pretrial prejudice from adverse media publicity. Sheppard's acquittal came at a 1966 retrial.

The doctor told authorities repeatedly that a bushy-haired intruder at the family home on Lake Erie early on July 4, 1954, beat his wife to death in her bed.

Sheppard said the attacker knocked him unconscious when he ran to help his wife. He caught up with the intruder on a beach behind the house but said he was knocked out again in another scuffle.

Under cross-examination, Bailey said Sheppard told him privately he had the impression — although he couldn't be certain — that he had confronted two people during the fatal attack.

Assistant County Prosecutor Steve Dever, part of the state's defense team, said during an argument without the jury present that Bailey's testimony is important because it showed Sheppard changed his story about the killing.

However Bailey said Sheppard was consistent.

"I think the bushy-haired man got a life of his own," Bailey said. "That was one feature of the assailant that Sam could remember."

Sam Reese Sheppard thinks a window washer for the family, Richard Eberling, was the murderer. Eberling was later convicted of stealing Mrs. Sheppard's rings in a 1959 burglary and was convicted in 1989 of killing an elderly widow; he died in prison.

Bailey said he adopted the theory that a couple in the Sheppards' neighborhood, Spencer and Esther Houk, were responsible for Mrs. Sheppard's beating death.

Bailey suggested in 1966 and still believes that Mrs. Houk might have delivered the fatal blows to Mrs. Sheppard after catching Houk having sex with her.

"Somebody was with her man and she didn't like it," Bailey said.

Both Houks have been dead for years. After Sheppard's 1966 trial, Bailey's theory of the murder was presented to a grand jury, which decided against indicting the Houks.

Houk was a butcher and mayor of the Cleveland suburb of Bay Village. The couple were the first people Sheppard called after his wife was killed.

Attorney asks killer's life be spared

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

TOLEDO — A defense attorney asked jurors Tuesday to spare the life of a man who shot and killed his longtime girlfriend and their unborn son.

The jury began deciding whether Terrance Davis should be sentenced to death or life in prison. Death penalty experts think it would be the first time someone in Ohio has been sentenced to death in the killing of a fetus.

The jury will recommend a sentence to Lucas County Common Pleas Judge Ronald Bowman, who will make the final decision.

Davis was convicted Saturday of murdering Sonya Hayes and the unborn baby — later named N'Kai Davis by the mother's relatives.

With the conviction, jurors determined the fetus that was just days away from being born was a viable person — a decision needed in order to trigger the death penalty.

To get the death sentence in Ohio, a person must be convicted of killing at least two people or killing someone while committing a specified felony such as aggravated robbery or arson.

Davis spoke publicly in the courtroom for the first time Tuesday, reading a brief statement.

"My heart and sympathy goes out to the family of Sonya and my daughter and my son," he said in a whisper.

Defense attorney Alan Konop asked jurors to remember that Davis, 27, was a loving father with two children and not to judge his life based on one act.

"Should any of us be judged by the worst thing that we've done," Konop asked.

"Must the carnage continue for justice to be served?" he asked jurors.

Assistant Lucas County Prosecutor Chris Anderson told jurors not to base their decision on emotion or mercy.

"He walked up to the car and put six bullets into her," Anderson said.

"This is really coldblooded."

Prosecutors said Davis killed Hayes and the fetus because he did not want to pay child support.

Davis' family members, including his mother, father and 9-year-old daughter, testified that he was a good person and hard-working.

During the often-emotional trial, family members at times cried and fidgeted. However, Davis' relatives spoke with little emotion Tuesday and rarely made eye contact with Davis.

Hayes and Davis grew up on the same street and began dating in high school. Relatives described it as a rocky relationship.

Hayes was sitting in her car outside the Davis house when a man wearing a mask shot her six times March 31. She died a few hours after the baby.

Ohio's law says a fetus should be considered a person when "there is realistic possibility of maintaining and nourishing of a life outside the womb."

Recreation sports offers women's weight class

Recreational sports is offering a class for women to learn the basics of weight training. "Women on Weights" will be held Feb. 9, 23 and March 1 from 12 p.m. to 1 p.m. in the Student Recreation Center weight room.

The cost of the series is $20. To register, call the recreation center at 2-2711 or sign up at the center's main office.

Winston James to visit campus

Winston James, an associate professor of history at Columbia University, will talk on his award-winning book "Holding Aloft the Banner of Ethiopia" at 10 a.m. (Location is to be announced).

She recommends that others serve in the Peace Corps.

"Don't allow worry or let anxiety get in the way," she said. "Anyone with an open mind and a sense of humor would make a great Peace Corps volunteer. The rest — the language, being far from home, etc. — will come together."

Carol Wilkerson, a Peace Corps public affairs specialist, said that the Peace Corps has campus offices at Oberlin College, Ohio State University, Ohio University and other Mid-American Conference colleges. They send out recruiters in Ohio during the spring and fall. If there is a great interest expressed at a college or university, then they will send a recruiter.

Doug Brock, a senior secondary education in history, recently went through the process to become a Peace Corps volunteer. He submitted his application in October and plans to leave for southeastern Europe in September.

"It was something I always wanted to do, since high school," he said. "I felt it was my duty to give back to the world. Plus I would be traveling and experiencing another culture."

According to Brock, the initial application required him to mail a resume and an essay explaining why he wanted to join Peace Corps to one of their regional offices. Two weeks later, he received the official application.

"When viewing applications, we look for people's availability — we often check up on them," Wilkerson said. "We also look at their flexibility, how willing they are to go wherever help is needed and do they stick with the program despite its length."

When the application is returned to the Peace Corps Office, a recruiter will then contact the person for an interview and attempt to match the applicant's qualifications with programs available. Peace Corps has 78 host countries and programs in the areas of education, environment, health, business and agriculture.

"Since their regional office is in Chicago, I had a phone interview," Brock said. "It was weird, though. It was about 9 a.m. and I was in my pajamas walking around my apartment with the phone."

The interview is an opportunity for the recruiter to determine whether the applicant is qualified and provides an opportunity for the applicant to ask additional questions about the program.

"The applicant can ask all kinds of questions and see if the Peace Corps is the right decision for them," Householder said. "After the interview, the recruiter will nominate the applicant to a program based on availability and skills."

Later the applicant is contacted and invited to serve in a certain country.

Prior to getting his assignment, surer," Gresko said.

"In the past, we didn't sit down and go through things as thoroughly as we should have," said Andy Tremsky, USG chief of staff. "Everybody was doing different things and not taking one task at a time, and we lost track."

Stuart believes the budget problems can be attributed to a lack of formal budgetary processes.

"There was no procedure or protocol previously," Stuart said. "The key phrase here is 'run-away expenditures.'"

USG president Clint Gault disagreed with the assertion that the expenditures were out of control.

"The reason some people may feel the expenditures were runaway was because they weren't being properly recorded, so nobody knew exactly what was being spent by whom and why," Gault said.

Gault added that his administration bears some responsibility for the budget problems.

"The reason the budget was in disarray before is the fault of many individuals in the organization," Gault said. "I took the word of the former treasurer, when in reality the Brock said he had to get his fingerprints taken, and have an FBI check for criminal records.

"They want to make sure you are not trying to leave the country," Brock said.

Once volunteers receive their assignment and accept it, they go through cross-cultural training which has two parts.

"There is language training with a certified instructor from the host country," Wilkerson said. "Then there is a safety and disaster training which informs the volunteer of precautions such as typhoon, hurricanes and volcanoes and how to cook food."

The process to become a Peace Corps volunteer depends on the number of requests and at what time the applications are submitted. For both Householder and Brock, it was almost a year-long process.

Wilkerson said that there have been people who dropped out of the program due to its length, but those who go through the program receive an excellent experience.

Householder agreed.

"Peace Corps can be a very overwhelming for some," Householder said. "Simply knowing what you want to do rather than feeling like you're obligated to do something is what must be learned."

The earliest one can participate Peace Corps is at age 18. Interested volunteers can request an application at the website at www.peacecorps.gov or contact the office at 1-800-424-8580. Applications should be delivered within 10 business days, according to Wilkerson.

Each program has its own requirements, but a volunteer must serve at least three years. Upon completion of the program, the volunteers receive $6,000. Additionally, while in the host country they receive a "living allowance" that covers their food, shelter, medical and health expenses.

business office was way behind in their work. What they told us took two weeks has taken months."

According to Gault, however, some of the budget problems are the fault of the previous administration.

"After last year, we were told we had a $10,000 carry-over from the last administration," Gault continued. "That's what I was told I had to work with. But there were many other unreported expenses cutting the carry-over by more than half."

To fix the budget problems, USG amended its bylaws Monday night to include a section regarding budget procedures.

The amendment states that the treasurer must authorize all expenditures under $50, the budget committee must authorize expenditures between $50 and $200, and the legislature must authorize expenditures greater than $200.

"We had a huge brainstorming session and thought these amounts would be most appropriate," Stuart said. "The treasurer should be able to use his or her discretion to allocate small amounts."

Gresko believes the new budget procedures will change the role of the treasurer.

"The treasurer needs to be strict and get more respect, and there will be less unapproved spending," Gresko said. "They will keep things running smoothly."

Tremsky disagrees with the new role of the treasurer, since the position of treasurer is presidentially appointed.

"The president is the one responsible for the organization, so I don't think the president should be excluded," Tremsky said. "The treasurer's role should be to advise and make suggestions."

USG members agree most of the problems have been worked out with the budget, and vigilance in the future is the way to keep any more problems from happening.

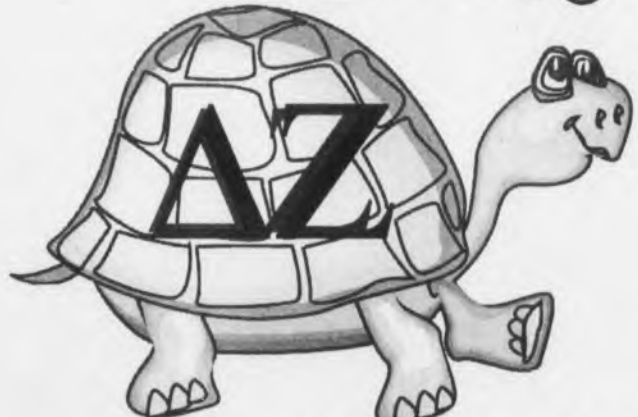

"I can guarantee you there will be audits of the budget at least weekly for the rest of the semester," Stuart said.

"Hopefully next Monday everything will be smoothed out, or pretty close," Gresko agreed.

Gault is relieved the current problems are being handled.

"This was a big deal, but it's something that has been handled now, and we have it under control now," Gault said.

The second coming of GoodStella

As most of you know or don't know, I cover the men's basketball team.

I have been involved with the team for almost two years and in that time, there is only one problem I have come across... I care too much about this team and how they do.

In my line of work, you can't show favorites and you must be neutral, which sucks considering how good the team is this year. But I can't help it; I want to see the Falcons win so bad and it pisses me off big-time when they lose or don't play to their and my expectations.

My boss always jokingly tells me he is going to take me off my beat because I am the number one Falcon basketball fan. One day he asked me why I was such a fan of this team. I thought about it for a while and then I came to a conclusion.

Seeing this team play takes me back to the day when I was an immature 16 and 17-year-old playing on the varsity basketball team at Mayfield High School, on the east side of Cleveland. I remember when I was a junior, we had the best team at Mayfield since the mid 80s and they haven't had one as good as us since. I remember what it was like to run out on the court in front of a home crowd and hear the explosion of the fans when a good play happened.

I was a player and a fan of basketball long before I decided to become a sports writer. I so enjoy watching this Falcon team play and even though I can't show it, I am cheering on the inside.

I was embarrassed to see the lack of fan support at the Buffalo game (only 2,500 plus considering the usual is 4,000 plus). Yes, it was in the aftermath of the Toledo beating, which hurt to watch, but a loss is no excuse to turn your back on a team you have cheered for all year.

The Falcons are all such classy guys, from the coaching staff to every single player on the squad. They leave us on the edge of our seats with their fast-break offense and show-time dunking. But they also pound on fundamentals and defense, which coach Dan Dakich stresses more than anything. Dakich is like a big kid and is fun and enjoyable to listen to. I am always careful what I ask him because if he is not in a good mood or the question is worded stupidly, he will make you pay with a not-so-nice comment. But it is all good and his laid-back and cool attitude make me enjoy this job that I have. He would be a fun guy to party with and I bet he has a million interesting stories about his life.

Today, the Falcons face the number one team in the conference, Kent State. Last month, BG traveled to Kent and got their beat really bad. But this is in Anderson Arena and the Falcons have had immense success this season on their home turf. Now some people said the Falcons couldn't win on the road and for a while, they were right. But I was at the Miami game, and if they play their last four games like they did at Oxford, you can notch four "W's" for the Falcons.

Those same people also say BG can't beat Kent. But let's look at something shall we: the game is in Anderson Arena, where the Falcons are 10-0 this season, it will be sold out, forward Anthony Stacey might become the all-time leading scorer and it is also the biggest game of the year. With these aspects on their side, the Brown and Orange are looking as tough as they can be.

I know in my heart the Falcons can win and they need all the support they can. Today's game has the potential of being one of the greatest sporting events in BG history. Don't read my article about it tomorrow, be there and be loud.

Pete Stella is the assistant sports editor for The News. He would love to get a shout out from the Sideline Squad tonight. He can be reached at pstella@bgnnews.com and he sits on the very top row of Anderson Arena. Say hi to him, he will be the cute one in a tie.

Men face tough test with Kent State

"Let's get ready to rumble," a wise man once said, who later sued several schools for using his famous line in warm-up tapes.

For the BG men's basketball team, they have a hard week of work ahead of them. Today, the battle of the season comes to Anderson Arena when Kent State faces the Falcons at 7 p.m. Saturday, BG faces Eastern Michigan, one of the few bright spots in the Mid-American Conference West division, for a 3:30 p.m. game.

Last Saturday behind a 13-0 run in the first half and key shooting from forward Anthony Stacey, the Falcons upended Miami 66-60. The win earned the Falcons their 18th on the season and their first at Millett Hall since the 1986-87 season. The Brown and Orange currently stand at 18-6 overall and 10-4 in the MAC. Kent, who has sole possession of first in the entire conference, brings a 20-4, 12-3 league mark. Eastern stands at 13-11, 7-8 in the MAC.

The last time BG fought the Golden Flashes, they were shown up by a 82-64 score January 26th.

"We have to be able to contain their (Kent's) guards better," BG coach Dan Dakich said. "(Last time) It was almost like the guards got a feeling they could do whatever they wanted to our guards."

The top scorer for Kent, guard

Trevor Huffman, was the one who lead the offensive attack against the Falcons last month with 16 points. Huffman is the leading scorer for Kent with 14 points per game and is fifth in the conference with 4.6 assists per game. Huffman is also second on the team with 33 three-point field goals and has come off the bench each of the 24 games.

Pre-season All-MAC center John Whorton compiles 12.3 ppg and leads the squad with 5.8 rebounds per game.

"We have to contain their guards and we have to contain Whorton," Dakich said. "You have to be able to play solid on everyone, that goes from the guards down to your help on Whorton."

Forward Kyrem Massey nets 10.8 ppg and guard Nate Meers is the leading three point shooter with a 40.0 percent from behind the arc.

"We need to get help on Massey without giving up other guys," Dakich said.

Guards Andrew Mitchell and Demetric Shaw form the starting backcourt, with Mitchell averaging 8.8 ppg and Shaw chipping in with 8.3 ppg and 4.9 rpg.

"This is the biggest game of the year," Stacey said.

Eastern has had a rough season this year but a big positive is forward Calvin Warner, who leads the team with 15.3 ppg and second on the team with a 7.4 rpg. Guard Corey Tarrant averages 10.7 ppg and forward Antonio Gates compiles a 10.4 ppg and leads the team with 7.8 rpg. Forward Adam Hess and guard C.J. Grantham top off the starting lineup. Hess averages 9.3 ppg and is tied for the team lead with 27 three pointers. Grantham chips in with 8 ppg and 3.5 assists per game.

Next week, the Falcons end the regular season with a pair of road matches. BG heads to Akron Thursday for a 7:30 p.m. game and Marshall Saturday. Tip-off for the Falcons final regular season game is set for 7 p.m.

Falcon Notes

BG is 10-0 this season at home and 74-14 in Anderson Arena over the last six-plus seasons.

The Falcons have won 14 in a row and 29 of their last 34 against conference foes.

The Brown and Orange was fifth in the country last week in field goal percentage and 10th in free throw percentage. Forward Len Matela was first in the nation in field goal percentage last week with a 64.2 percent.

The Falcons 49.8 percentage from the field leads the MAC.

Tonight's basketball game is an important one for many people.

The BG students and staff, the community and most importantly the players, coaches and other people directly involved with the Falcons will all be cheering and hoping for the best possible outcome. A win would move the Brown and Orange closer to first place along with confidence and national attention.

For fifth-year senior forward Anthony Stacey, tonight could be his greatest performance as a Falcon. Stacey only needs 13 points to pass Howard Komives' 1,834 mark set during his tenure during the 1962-64 seasons. Komives captained the 1963-64 squad and that year, averaged 36.7 points per game. In 1964, he earned third team All-American honors from the AP and UPI.

The Ohio Bobcats can't seem to stop Angie Farmer.

The Bowling Green guard poured in a game-high 23 points and helped the Falcons to a 70-65 win at Anderson Arena Tuesday night. BG (5-8, 7-16) pulled even with OU (5-7, 10-14) in the Mid-American Conference playoff race and now holds the tie-breaker advantage over the Bobcats by virtue of the season sweep.

Farmer scored the first 12 points of the game and carried BG throughout the first half. She had 15 points in the first 7:07 of the first half and matched her total from the Jan. 15 win at OU with six three-pointers.

"It's always nice to get off to a fast start, but I am normally not that type of a player," Farmer said. "The second half seems to be when I normally run a little string together. When I get that many open looks early, it lets me get some confidence, and when I get some confidence, it becomes fun."

The Falcons got 17 points from Francine Miller and seven points, nine rebounds, and five assists from Sherry Kahle before she fouled out with 1:32 to play.

Bobcats coach Lynn Bria said the game was decided by the time Farmer hit her sixth consecutive shot to put OU in a 22-5 hole.

"We lost the game in the first five minutes," Bria said. "Against a team like Bowling Green, you have to get out on them and pressure them early. They shoot the ball so well, if you don't get out there and make them work, they will get in a groove."

The Bobcats got within 28-23 with 2:20 left in the half thanks to the team's eight offensive rebounds and a balanced scoring attack. All nine OU players who saw action in the first 20 minutes scored at least two points, but 14 Bobcats turnovers helped BG cling to a 35-29 halftime advantage.

BG had its own turnover troubles. The Falcons lost the ball 23 times in the game. OU finished with 27 turnovers.

Farmer said the BG turnovers were mostly unforgotten and could easily have led to a loss. She was surprised to find herself with so many good looks at the basket.

"In transition, their point guard had me two times in a row and she didn't close out very hard," said Farmer of her first-half shooting display. "She sat down for a long time after that."

The Bobcats trailed 53-39 at the 12:13 mark of the second half when Bria added a third post player to the lineup to pound the smaller Falcons in the paint.

"The problem was that they would get it into the low post where we always double-team, but then they passed it to the high post," BG coach Dee Knoblauch said. "Because she was so much taller than our guard, the high post was making one more pass and it was an easy pass for her."

The result was a series of trips to the free-

Final 5 help Falcons win big

Unlike Saturday's 92-69 loss vs. Eastern Michigan, the Bowling Green women's basketball team came through in the final five minutes to record a huge victory over Ohio Tuesday.

Just when the Bobcats went on a 9-1 run to grab a 59-58 lead and the momentum on a Khisha Asubuhi three-pointer, which came on a designed three-player inbound screen at the top of the key with 4:59 to go in the game, the Falcons seized the momentum right back.

BG's Angie Farmer grabbed the rebound off an Ohio miss and threw the outlet pass to Francine Miller;

Miller found guard Kim Griech in transition. Griech dribbled up the left arc, set her feet and sunk a trey with 3:50 remaining to give the Falcons the lead for good at 61-59.

"I think that was turning point in the game," Farmer said. "Anytime you have a shot and a stop, it's great, and it carried over."

Before Griech hit the three, Falcon coach Dee Knoblauch had Jaymee Wappes ready to go in for her. Wappes, who was banged up a little after Asubuhi's three and had to sit out for a short time, went in for Farmer instead at that point.

After Ohio guard Heather Laughlin traveled, Griech made another heads-up play saving a bad pass from going out of bounds. Ohio eventually fouled Miller and Miller calmly sunk two free throws to make it 63-59 BG with 3:07 left.

Following consecutive turnovers, forward Dana Western came through for BG. Center Sherry Kahle drove the lane and kicked the ball out to Western on the top of the key. Western swished the trey to extend BG's lead to 66-59.

After Ohio's Beckie Fisher missed her second free throw, which came via Kahle's fifth foul, Western came through with a big rebound. She later stepped in the way of an Ohio pass with 56.2 seconds left on the press when Ohio was bringing the ball upcourt.

Death penalty sought for Carruth

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CHARLOTTE, N.C. — Prosecutors made it official Tuesday: They want the death penalty for Rae Carruth.

With Carruth and his mother in court, the prosecution said special circumstances warrant the death penalty for the former Carolina Panthers player.

However, Assistant District Attorney Gentry Caudill would not say what those circumstances were.

From the outset of the case, the prosecution has said it would seek the death penalty in the murder of Carruth's girlfriend. But the request was finally put before Judge Shirley Fulton on Tuesday.

Carruth did not speak during the brief hearing.

His lawyer, David Rudolf, said Carruth is doing well, given the situation.

"He has faith and he knows he's innocent," he said, joined by Carruth's mother. "And he has faith that the system will work."

Rudolf asked the judge to encourage prosecutors to begin turning over evidence, such as witness statements and telephone records.

"We have not gotten anything, not a single piece of paper," he said outside the courthouse. "It's important that discovery rolls ahead so we can start working on the case."

Caudill said the district attorney's office will provide the material as quickly as possible. The judge scheduled a hearing for April 3 to review progress.

Carruth and three co-defendants are charged with first-degree murder in the drive-by shooting in November.

Cherica Adams, 24, was shot four times in her car while driving on Nov. 16. Soon afterward, she gave birth to son Chancellor, 10 weeks premature. Adams died Dec. 14.

A similar hearing was held Tuesday for two of the other three defendants.

Stanley Abraham, 19, and Michael Kennedy, 24, appeared briefly before the judge. The death penalty will be sought against them as well.

Browns sign lineman

CLEVELAND — Still looking for a running back, the Cleveland Browns turned to other needs Tuesday, agreeing to a contract with offensive lineman Everett Lindsay and visiting with defensive back Percy Ellsworth.

Lindsay, who played for Baltimore last season, signed a reported five-year deal with the Browns. The 6-foot-4, 302-pounder has played all five down positions in the NFL, and is expected to compete for the Browns' starting right guard job next season.

Meanwhile, the team is talking with Ellsworth, a safety who led the New York Giants with six interceptions last season.

Ellsworth, 25, has played five seasons in the league after being drafted out of Virginia. He has increased his interception total in each of the past four seasons.

After free agent running back James Stewart snubbed them by signing with Detroit, the Browns are exploring other options to get backfield help.

One of the strongest rumors floating around has the Browns talking with Denver about Orlando Gary, who rushed for 1,159 yards last season filling while Terrell Davis was injured.

Fernandez signs minor league deal with Reds

CINCINNATI — Right-hander Osvaldo Fernandez, who has not pitched in the majors since 1997, signed a nonguaranteed minor league contract Tuesday with the Cincinnati Reds.

Fernandez, 31, was invited to training camp in Sarasota, Fla. The Reds expect 37 pitchers and seven catchers to report Wednesday.

Fernandez had surgery on his elbow in July 1997 and attempted to come back the next spring, but hurt the elbow again in an exhibition game. He had more surgery in May 1998.

Fernandez pitched on a rehab assignment for San Francisco's Class A team in San Jose last year and went 0-1 with a 6.00 ERA in four starts.

He defected from Cuba in 1995 and signed with the Giants in January 1996.

Lewis freed on million dollar bond after 2 weeks in jail

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

ATLANTA — Surrounded by deputies, a smiling Ray Lewis left jail on $1 million bond Tuesday, slipped silently into a car and rode away with his lawyers, mother and fiancée.

The Baltimore Ravens linebacker is free for the first time since Jan. 31, when he was charged with murdering two men after a Super Bowl party earlier that day.

Lewis, wearing a brown football jersey with the word "Supreme" on the back, said nothing as he got into the front seat of a car. His lawyer, Ed Garland, said Lewis felt sympathy for the families of the two men who were killed and looked forward to clearing his name.

Lewis' mother sat in the back seat, a copy of "The Inspirational Study Bible" on her lap. Lewis' fiancée sat with two young boys on her lap beside his mother.

Lewis will spend time with his family in Atlanta and then return home to Baltimore Wednesday, Garland said.

The release on bond was "step one" for Lewis, Garland said.

"The next step is to get him acquitted," he said. "I never expect him to set foot in a jail again, unless it's to do charitable work."

About 90 minutes before Lewis left the jail, another defendant, Reginald Oakley, arrived with his lawyer to surrender. A third suspect, Joseph Sweeting, surrendered Monday.

Lewis, 24, and his two companions are charged with murder in the stabbing deaths of two men during a brawl outside an Atlanta nightclub.

Lewis, Sweeting, 34, of Miami, and Oakley, 31, of Baltimore, were indicted Friday in the deaths of Richard Lollar, 24, and Jacinth Baker, 21, who were stabbed during the 4 a.m. fight outside an Atlanta nightclub.

Lewis' lawyers say he tried to stop the fight and that he was at least 60 feet away when Lollar and Baker, both of nearby Decatur, were stabbed. Police say Lewis drove away in a limousine and later lied when they tried to determine who was in his entourage.

After hearing from Lewis' family, Baltimore safety Ron Woodson, Tampa Bay defensive end Warren Sapp, Ravens owner Art Modell and other witnesses, Superior Court Judge Doris Downs ruled Monday that Lewis posed no significant risk to flee or to intimidate witnesses in the case.

Lewis posted $200,000 of his bond in cash. Nine bond surety companies in the Atlanta area provided the remaining $800,000, plus $80,000 in surcharges.

The bond requires Lewis to stay in Maryland unless he is traveling to Georgia for court appearances or to meet with his lawyers.

CARRUTH

The hearing for the other defendant, Van Brett Watkins, will be held later this month because one of his lawyers was involved in another murder case Tuesday.

All four are being held in the county jail without bail.

Last week, Carruth reiterated that he did not kill Adams. He said he was on the phone and miles away from the murder scene.

Prosecutors and another defendant have said Carruth was talking with one of three other murder suspects from his nearby car when Adams was shot.

Kennedy lawyer James Exum says his client maintains Carruth was talking by cell phone with one of the murder suspects at the time of the shooting.

Carruth's telephone records show his phone was used to call Atlanta at 12:27 a.m. Nov. 16. The phone call lasted 16 minutes, until 12:43 a.m. Police have said Adams was killed between 12:34 a.m. and 12:36 a.m. Her 911 call to police was made at 12:36 a.m.

Rudolf wants to disqualify Exum from representing Kennedy. He contends Exum waived attorney-client privilege by telling reporters about confidential communications he had with Kennedy. That makes Exum a potential witness, Rudolf said.

Rudolf wants to address this matter at the April 3 hearing.

maybe I shouldn't deserve to break the record," Stacey said. "He wished me luck at the beginning of the season and told me to go break it."

But for Stacey, the record will only be sweet if the Falcons get the win over Kent.

"I am not going into Wednesday's game to break the record. I am going in to win the game," Stacey said. "It would be great if I could do both on one day."

Senior forward Dave Esterkamp needs just eight markers to become the 30th player in BG history to hit 1,000 career points.

"How sweet would a night would that be?," Stacey said. "Esterkamp is coming up on 1000 points, how sweet would that be? 1000, the record and the win all in one night. That would be a hell of a party."

"Regardless of what happens in the game, he will look back and it's a tremendous accomplishment," BG coach Dan Dakich said. "I know how he is; he won't be happy should we lose."

Dakich came into power during Stacey's third year, which turned out to be his red-shirt year due to several injuries throughout the course of the season. He is confident Stacey is more than capable of breaking the record.

"I like records and I like when they are being broken," Dakich said. "But I know this, I know Stacey will break the record, Stacey knows he will break the record so it's really not a concern. I just hope he does it in a game where we win."

Stacey makes his booming presence felt wherever he goes. Against Miami last Saturday, Stacey backed in to a RedHawk defender then did his trademark beautiful turn-around jumper to help the Falcons win in the closing minutes of the second half.

"He's been making that since birth," Dakich said. "I wouldn't let anyone else shoot it."

Tonight could be one of the greatest sporting nights in all of BG history. But Stacey won't miss all the attention his record-chasing has brought him.

"A lot of people ask me about it and a lot of people call me about it," Stacey said. "I will be glad to get it over with."

"How sweet would a night would that be? Esterkamp is coming up on 1000 points, how sweet would that be? 1000, the record and the win all in one night. That would be a hell of a party."

"At that point, you just need a stop, and we didn't get it," Ohio coach Lynn Bria said.

Despite just four points, Western came through with seven rebounds, which would be the third-highest of the game behind Kahle's nine and Laughlin's eight.

"I knew my game wasn't on it, so I had to play hard when I was in," Western said. "I think I helped out the team, and I think we all worked hard together the last three minutes like we realized we couldn't just let them go for lay-ups."

Following a Cathy Szall triple, Miller made two free throws and also hit another crucial one with 18 seconds left to make it 69-65 Falcons after a Lori Moorman score. Miller came through in the end despite committing seven turnovers. She also had six assists, a block, two steals and made 5-of-6 free throws in the game.

"Frannie is just a tough competitor," Knoblauch said. "You can see that she does get mad at herself out there. But she'll come through for us. She's still one of our best rebounders. I don't know if she had a big rebound in the end but she's always tough."

After Ohio's Jacquie Negrelli overthrew her intended target, Farmer made one of two free throws to make the final score of 70-65.

throw line and a 9-0 run over the next four minutes. OU took a 59-58 lead with 5:01 to play (see sidebar) before BG recovered with a 12-6 run the rest of the way.

Knoblauch said she was pleased with her team's defensive effort and communication on the floor.

BG is currently one game behind a three-way tie for the final home court position in the MAC tournament.

"We still have a very realistic shot at that seventh or eighth seed," she said. "We have to take care of business. We have Miami on Saturday and they just thumped us in Oxford."

Griffey returns, pitching in question

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CINCINNATI — The Ken Griffey Jr. trade gave the Cincinnati Reds a superstar and surge of interest as spring training approached.

So far, so good. Now, who's going to pitch?

The trade that reunited Junior with his hometown also subtracted from an already shaky starting rotation. The Seattle Mariners got right-hander Brett Tomko as part of the five-player deal.

When Griffey shows up along with the other position players next week in Sarasota, Fla., all the attention is going to be on the center fielder.

A more important chore starts in Sarasota this week, when the Reds begin weeding through 37 pitchers to figure out who's in the rotation.

Griffey may get the headlines, but it will be the pitching that either gets the Reds to the playoffs or makes them miss out once again.

And right now, there are at least as many questions about the pitching as there are pitchers in camp — 37, after they invited Osvaldo Fernandez on Tuesday.

"That's not enough," general manager Jim Bowden said. "You don't get enough pitching. We've all talked about it. Pitching is going to separate how far you go."

Last season, the Reds made it to the doorstep of the playoffs, losing a wild card tiebreaker to the New York Mets. They made it that far because their bullpen led the majors with a 3.36 earned run average and Ron Villone and Steve Parris joined the rotation during the season and had career years.

The Reds also got a boost down the stretch from Juan Guzman, acquired in a July 31 trade with Baltimore. Guzman left as a free agent after the season.

The bullpen is intact, though not without questions.

Sanders to keep bonus money

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

DETROIT — The Detroit Lions were awarded some — but not all — of the money they wanted returned from retired running back Barry Sanders.

An NFL arbitrator ruled Tuesday that Sanders must pay back $1.8 million of his $11 million signing bonus. For the Lions to get the rest of it, they have to wait — and Sanders must stay retired.

The Lions wanted Sanders to return $5.5 million of the bonus he got in 1997. He played two years of a six-year contract before starting the NFL by leaving football on the eve of training camp.

Sanders was only 1,458 yards shy of breaking Walter Payton's NFL career record of 16,726 yards.

His agent, David Ware, thinks that more significant than the ruling by arbitrator Sam Kagel was Detroit's signing of running back James Stewart on Monday.

That, Ware said, might prompt the Lions to release Sanders and let him play elsewhere.

Kagel ruled that Sanders owed the Lions only one-sixth of the $11 million bonus he received in 1997 because he's missed only one season so far.

Sanders already has offered to pay back half, or $5.5 million if the Lions will release him and allow him to play elsewhere.

Chuck Schmidt, the Lions' chief operating officer, said the club already had withheld $1.75 million of the signing bonus from the check they sent Sanders for last season. That means Sanders now owes the team $80,000 to comply with Kagel's ruling.

Unless he returns to football, he will owe $1.83 million on future reporting dates. Sanders hasn't paid back any money.

"We have contended all along that just because you've retired you don't owe the entire amount back," Ware said. "He ruled consistent with our position."

Ware said he would approach the Lions within a few days with the same offer he made last August: repaying $5.5 million in exchange for Sanders' release. But that does not appear likely.

"As we have always maintained, it is our intention to take Barry at his word that he has retired from professional football," Schmidt said.

"We would welcome him back as a Detroit Lion should he voice to us his desire to return to active duty in the NFL. Until then, we will hold him to the conditions put forth by the arbitrator in this case."

The NFL Players Association said the door remains open for Sanders to fulfill his contract.

"We are pleased that the arbitrator limited his award to games missed," union lawyer Richard Berthelsen said. "The Lions were obviously overreacting with their claim..."
